

Setting Description WAGOLL

Andy's Room

Andy's room was familiar to Woody as he climbed from the toy box. As his iconic boot set foot on the laminate floor, he looked around at his surroundings. The floor had been recently polished and very few toys had been left to litter the floor. Beneath the window, which was to his right, a red desk stood. Woody could just see the front edge of a laptop and the looming presence of the desk lamp: it was the same red as the desk. The chair was facing the door as though its loyal owner had left in a hurry. The blue walls were plastered with posters and wall hangings, from movie posters which looked oddly familiar to calendars and drawings of Woody and the gang. In the corner of the room, a small TV stood. The screen flickered suddenly.
