

Pet Care of a Cat

Cats are a very popular pet in the UK. They might come and go when they want, but need careful looking after.

Cat behaviour

If a cat does any of these things, it might mean they are distressed:

- licking themselves a lot;
- hiding more often;
- sleeping hunched up.

If a cat does shows this behaviour, it can mean they are in pain:

- being bad tempered or angry;
- disappearing for a long time;
- keeping away from people.

How to treat a cat

Cats will come for a cuddle when they feel ready. You must not try to force them to sit on your knee or be stroked. Remember, each cat is an individual, so will behave differently.

Things to remember:

- Cats need exercise. They need to go outside, or have toys to play with.
- Cats need to scratch their claws to keep them sharp. If they are not given a proper scratching post, they may use the sofa!

Look after them properly, and your cat will be your best friend.
