

Penguin Adaptations Answers

How is the penguin adapted to living in Antarctica?

Short, sharp beak for grabbing and cutting food.

Flippers for travelling quickly underwater.

Short, thick feathers to keep them warm. They are tightly packed together and overlap.

Thick layer of blubber to keep them warm in the cold, Antarctic temperatures.

Webbed feet for fast swimming.

